1 About the Qualification

1.1 Introduction

Aim of qualification

The Principles of Customer Service award offers the opportunity for candidates to study the principles of customer service in the context of a variety of settings. It concentrates on core essential areas which are likely to be required on a day to day basis in the delivery of customer service in all businesses and which will underpin future studies in this area. This qualification contributes to the knowledge and understanding requirements in the N/SVQs in Customer Service at the related levels. This single unit award is available at three levels.

Level 1

This level aims to provide the learner with the essential knowledge and skills required to deliver good customer service within the limit of their responsibility. They will show an understanding of what is meant by customer satisfaction and what the needs and expectations of different customers are and how to deal with them, demonstrating the knowledge of appropriate verbal and non-verbal communication techniques. At Level 1, candidates will be expected to:

- complete routine forms accurately using information supplied
- record customer information and know why this must be kept confidential
- describe the steps that could be used to solve customer queries and complaints
- demonstrate written communication skills by accurately drafting messages and correspondence according to guidance, and describe appropriate non-verbal skills
- identify different types of customer and ways of dealing with them.

Level 2

Candidates will develop an understanding of the qualities and interpersonal skills required to deliver good customer service and learn how to adapt and apply these to dealing with customers with different needs in a variety of situations. They will gain an understanding of the impact of customer service on the organisation's reputation, and the importance of the organisational policies and procedures in place and how they affect the service deliverer. At Level 2, candidates will be expected to:

- identify organisational standards, policies and procedures
- apply knowledge to solve customer queries and complaints
- demonstrate written communication skills by accurately drafting messages and correspondence
- describe communication and interpersonal skills required to deal with different customers
- record and use customer information according to current legislation
- create questions suitable for gathering customer feedback.

Level 3

At this level, candidates will not only have an understanding of the qualities and interpersonal skills required to deliver efficient and reliable customer service, but also how these should be adapted to suit different customers and situations and how they can be monitored and developed in others within the team. They will also show an understanding of how the service offer is developed, how it can be monitored and improved, and how organisations can use customer feedback to target and promote products and services. At Level 3, candidates will be expected to:

- identify and apply organisational standards, policies and procedures in providing customer service
- analyse, select and use information from various sources for a given purpose
- select, use and adapt appropriate communication techniques
- provide solutions to customer problems that are acceptable to both parties
- suggest and evaluate promotional techniques
- design methods of capturing customer information and feedback
- analyse customer feedback to suggest improvements to service
- create materials that contribute to effective team work
- assess their own and others' customer service skills and draw up development plans.

It is expected at all levels that candidates will have a basic knowledge of accepted standards in composing business letters that will create a good impression on customers and should include:

- the date
- the addressee's address
- a salutation (Dear Sir, Dear Mr X)
- a complimentary close (Yours faithfully, Yours sincerely).

See Appendix 1 for an example of a business letter.

At Level 3, candidates may also be expected to write informal short reports that demonstrate the candidate's communication skills and ability to logically organise and structure information required by using, for example, an introduction, headings, paragraphs. Reports may be in the form of a memo or other accepted layout.

Target group

Level 1

The qualification is aimed at people seeking a first qualification in customer service. It is a single subject, demonstrating an understanding of the principles behind customer service and a foundation upon which to progress within this particular area of study. Potential job occupations are: Bank/Building Society Customer Adviser, Customer Service Adviser (Post Office), Customer Service Assistant/Manager or Local Government Customer Services Officer.

This qualification provides opportunities for the learner to progress onto our Level 2/3 Certificates in Customer Service, as well as the possibility of getting a job within the Customer Service environment where they could then progress onto the Level 1/2/3 NVQ in Customer Service.

Level 2

Candidates at this level are likely to have had some experience in dealing with customers and wish to further develop and apply their skills.

Level 3

This level of study is aimed at candidates with experience of working in a customer services environment who wish to progress to supervisory level. Candidates are likely to have experience of working as part of a team and now wish to develop their own skills further as well as progressing to a supportive role.

2 General information for centres

Guided learning hours

City & Guilds do not determine the length of courses, or the number of hours of study required (ie in the classroom or in self-study set by the trainer/tutor).

The best indicator is when candidates have covered all areas of the syllabus and can successfully complete a sample test paper within the given time.

Success in the examination results from demonstrating the ability to achieve the objectives that will be tested. Practice papers will enable candidates to know what is expected of them in an examination.

The recommended learning hours are 30 hours for Level 1, 60 hours for Level 2 and 90 hours for Level 3. Please note that the length of each course will vary according to the circumstances and learners.

The examination

For all three levels the examination is printed in a question booklet, consisting of two sections. Section A contains short-answer questions and Section B requires the candidate to complete practical tasks based on a short scenario.

All questions and tasks are compulsory.

Candidates must complete all tasks within the examination time.

Calculators and English and mother tongue dictionaries are allowed during the examination.

All final answers must be in blue or black ink.

If additional separate sheets of paper are used, they should be clearly labelled with the candidate's name.

We recommend that candidates complete the paper in task order.

Examination times

Level 1

The examination lasts for 1 hour (plus 5 minutes' reading time). Note making during reading time is not allowed.

Level 2

The examination lasts for 1 hour 30 minutes (plus 5 minutes' reading time). Note making during reading time is not allowed.

Level 3

The examination lasts for 2 hours (plus 5 minutes' reading time). Note making during reading time is not allowed.

Assessment

Candidates' performance will be assessed as follows:

Marks for Sections A and B are aggregated.

At least 40% must be achieved in each section.

Level 1

To be awarded a Pass, candidates must achieve 55%.

A First Class Pass will be awarded to candidates who achieve 70% overall.

Level 2

To be awarded a Pass candidates must achieve 55%.

A First Class Pass will be awarded to candidates who achieve 70% overall.

Level 3

To be awarded a Pass candidates must achieve 55%.

A First Class Pass will be awarded to candidates who achieve 70% overall.

3 Principles of Customer Service – Level 1

3.1 Syllabus Objectives

The syllabus aims to provide the candidate with the skills required to deliver efficient and reliable customer service, gaining an understanding of customer expectations and needs in order to deal effectively with customers' queries and complaints.

There are four learning outcomes to be assessed. The candidate will:

1. know how to deliver good customer service
2. know different communication methods
3. know how to provide good customer service in line with organisational procedures
4. know how to effectively deal with customer queries, problems and complaints.

3.2 Sample Question Paper

Level 1 Sample Assessment Material

3.4 Worked Question Paper

The following sample worked paper is designed to reflect what a candidate might produce under examination conditions. Some of the answers and approaches taken are incorrect and not in line with the sample marking scheme; this is to indicate how the paper of a typical candidate might be assessed. These answers and approaches do, however, reflect what examiners see in the work of candidates.

Except where candidate answers match the marking scheme, the marks indicated are justified and explained in the same way that tutors would provide feedback to students.

Points which can be learnt from this analysis of the assessment are included in a later section on tips, guidance and recommendations to prepare candidates to pass their examination.

(Marks awarded are in red)

Section A

Total= 6 marks

Candidate loses 2 x 1/2 mark (ie 1 mark) for not including a date and address.

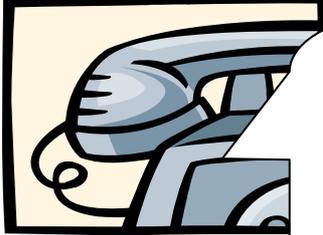

Candidate also loses a mark for clarity/construction as the text about the resolution reached has been lifted from the complaint form without adapting it to make sense in the letter, ie changing "directly to the customer" to "directly to you".

A further mark is lost as there is no introduction/acknowledgement of the complaint/reference to the product. Candidate could have achieved this mark by including a heading with the product details and beginning the letter "Further to your complaint about the above ..."

4.4 Worked Question Paper

The following sample worked paper is designed to reflect what a candidate might produce under examination conditions. Some of the answers and approaches taken are incorrect and not in line with the sample marking scheme; this is to indicate how the paper of a typical candidate might be assessed. These answers and approaches do, however, reflect what examiners see in the work of candidates.

Except where candidate answers match the marking scheme, the marks indicated are justified and explained in the same way that tutors would provide feedback to students.

Points which can be learnt from this analysis of the assessment are included in a later section on tips, guidance and recommendations to prepare candidates to pass their examination.

Section B Answer all questions in this section – 24 marks.

Question 1 – 7 marks

Scenario

You work as part of the customer service team at NuFashions Ltd, a new but quickly growing mail order clothing company. The manager, Gina Cohen, is keen to ensure that excellent customer service is provided.

You have the following tasks to perform:

- 1. Draft a customer charter
- 2. Create an advice sheet on handling complaints
- 3. Design a complaint log
- 4. Write a telephone operator's script

Gina has asked you to draft out a customer charter with:

(7 marks)

- three different commitments to the customer
- the complaints procedure
- a relevant ethical standard.

Customer Charter

Commitments to the Customer

Help the customer as much as possible eg. if a product is out of stock try to help them by offering alternatives. ✓ 1 mark

Ensure that deliveries are sent out asap to ensure customer satisfaction.

Ensure the customer is sent the correct items in their deliveries.

Complaints Procedure

Write down the customer's name, address, telephone number and complaint and tell them you will raise it to the manager.

Manager will try to rectify the problem and contact the complainee with the outcome. ✓ 1 mark

Ethical Standard

Treat each customer the same despite their nationalities, disabilities, gender etc.

✓ 1 mark - charter content relevant to mail order company

Total marks awarded - 3

Candidate has attained a low score on this task and has obviously not seen enough examples of customer charters. It has been written in the form of instructions to employees rather than outlining to customers what they can expect.

Candidate has scored one mark for contextualising for a mail order company; one mark for the policy of sending alternative items – the second and third 'commitments' are what would be expected by any customer of any company. One mark awarded for stating something the organisation will do in the event of a complaint; the other item stated is instructions to employees.

The candidate has not understood the concept of ethical standards throughout the paper and on this occasion is stating a legal obligation of the organisation

Question 2 - 7 marks

(7 marks)

As there are a number of new telesales staff, Gina has asked you to create an advice sheet that can be sent to all staff, giving six pieces of advice on how they should handle customer complaints.

Handling Customer Complaints ✓

Answer the phone politely and ask the customer what the problem is. ✓

Remain calm even if the customer is not. ✓

Be sympathetic to the customer without making derogatory comments about the company or other members of staff. ✓

Assure them that you will pass the complaining on to a higher level who will get back to them within a few days. ✓

Try to do what you can for the customer whilst talking to them.

Do not hang up on the customer if they are being threatening or rude allow them to finish and tell them that their complaint has been noted and someone will get back to them with the outcome. ✓

Total marks awarded 6

A good task: Candidate scores one mark for appropriate heading and 5 out of 6 possible marks for the advice. No mark has been awarded for "try to do what you can for the customer whilst talking to them" as there is insufficient explanation as to what this means.

Question 3 - 7 marks

(7 marks)

Use the box below to design a complaint log to take details of any complaints, include six pieces of information.

Total 3 marks

| Customer Name ✓ ① | Contact details ✓ ① | Complaint ✓ ① |
|-------------------|--|---------------|
| | Address: Tel. No: Email: | |
| | Address: Tel. No: Email: | |
| | Address: Tel. No: Email: | |

Candidate loses marks for not including a heading and for omission of the following items, which would be considered essential:

- Action
- Date
- Complaint taken by

Candidates should have plenty of practice in logging complaints in order to be familiar with the information required and the implications of what may happen if insufficient information is gained.

Question 4 - 3 marks

In order to be consistent, all staff are to answer the telephone in the same way. Write what the telesales staff should say when answering a call to a customer.

Good Morning/Afternoon ✓, this is / name / from NuFashion, ✓ How may I help you? ✓

A good paper, with the candidate achieving comfortably more than the 33 marks required for a Pass. This candidate would have benefited from more exposure to different mechanisms and procedures that organisations use to achieve customer satisfaction. Greater familiarity with the syllabus and what are generally considered to be 'customers' needs and expectations' etc will enable the candidate to interpret what is required as an answer rather than guessing.

5 Principles of Customer Service Level 3

5.1 Syllabus objectives

The aim of the syllabus is to provide the candidate with the skills required to deliver efficient, reliable customer service and how to develop, monitor and improve existing service. It will also give them an understanding of the benefits of developing their own as well as others' skills within the customer service environment.

There are seven learning outcomes to be assessed. The candidate will:

- know the key features of a service offer and its effects on customer expectations
- know how to deliver reliable customer service
- understand how to deal with different customer behaviours to ensure customer satisfaction
- understand how customer service can be developed and improved
- understand how the promotion of products and services can benefit the customer and the organisation
- understand the benefits of team-working in delivering good customer service
- understand how to develop the customer service skills of self and others

Scenario

You work as the supervisor of a small team that sells advertising space in TradeUp!, a motoring magazine. You report directly to Dan Clark, the Editor in Chief and owner of the magazine.

You have the following tasks to complete today:

- Report on methods of obtaining feedback.
- Create a letter of apology.
- Create an email on performance review.

Question 1 – 12 marks

Dan wishes to gain feedback from the magazine's advertising customers on the level of customer service received. Write a report to compare two possible methods of gathering customer feedback that could be used, with a recommendation as to which would be the most effective and a suggestion on how to encourage customer response to the request for feedback.

A large, empty rectangular box with a thin black border, occupying most of the page. It is intended for the student to write their answer to the question above.

(12 marks)

Question 2 – 11 marks

You have been asked to deal with the following complaint recorded in the customer complaints log this morning. The cause was an error in completing the order form by a junior member of staff. Using the letterhead below, write a letter of apology to deal with the matter effectively and informing the client of the action to be taken by the organisation to ensure it does not happen again.

Grading Criteria Level 3

Marks for Sections A and B are aggregated.

At least 40% must be achieved in each section: Section A: min 20 marks; Section B: min 13 marks.

Pass = 55% (44 out of 80 marks)

First Class Pass = 70% overall (56 out of 80 marks)

Level 3 Sample Assessment Material

6.3 Worked Question Paper

The following sample worked paper is designed to reflect what a candidate might produce under examination conditions. Some of the answers and approaches taken are incorrect and not in line with the sample marking scheme; this is to indicate how the paper of a typical candidate might be assessed. These answers and approaches do, however, reflect what examiners see in the work of candidates.

The marks indicated are justified and explained in the same way that tutors would provide feedback to students.

Points which can be learnt from this analysis of the assessment are included in a later section on tips, guidance and recommendations to prepare candidates to pass their examination.

1 Identify four ways an organisation can continue to meet its customers' expectations.

Mystery Shoppers to test standards. ✓

Suggestion boxes ✓

Regular staff training and refresher courses ✓

Carefully hiring individuals with a good personality match for the job to build an effective service team.

(4 marks)

Q1 Mark has been awarded for first item as candidate has qualified how it is relevant. Item 2 is an example of customer feedback.

2 List four possible limitations when formulating an organisation's service offer.

(4 marks)

3 State four possible outcomes of not maintaining the confidentiality of customer and organisational records.

Fraud

Breach of data protection act ✓

Identity theft ✓

Legal action against company ✓

3

(4 marks)

Q3 First item requires clarification as to what is meant by 'fraud' in this instance.

4 Describe four ways an organisation's staff resources could undermine its service offer.

Insufficient wage budget meaning that staff cuts leaves the organisation short staffed as this will impact the customer service. ✓

Lack of training and inability to send staff away for courses meaning that there skills are not improved upon. ✓

Lacking the resources to hire staff with the levels of experience and expertise that are required. ✓

3

(4 marks)

Q4 Whilst item 3 is not on the marking scheme, it is considered a valid answer.

5 State three different behaviours a customer may display and briefly describe how to deal with each.

Angry ✓ - a customer may have a complaint about the product. React politely and offer compensation where appropriate. ✓

Happy and receptive ✓ - The staff should recognise a receptive customer and attempt to upsell products. ✓

Aggressive ✓ - If the customer becomes aggressive or threatens staff they should be asked to leave or be removed by security staff. ✓

(6 marks)

6

Q5 Whilst item 2 is not on the marking scheme, it is considered a valid answer.

6 State two outcomes a customer may expect from the organisation when making a complaint.

The customer could expect a replacement for a faulty product. ✓

If the customer experience has been particularly bad they can often be given freebies by way of apology. ✓

2

(2 marks)

7 Identify and describe two methods an organisation can measure current levels of customer service.

Mystery shoppers ✓

Individuals employed by the company visit "undercover" and assess the customer service. ✓

Customer satisfaction survey ✓

Ask customers to leave feedback on their customer service experience. ✓

4

(4 marks)

8 List four benefits a customer may be looking for in the purchase of any product or service.

Value for money/ a competitive price. ✓

Advice and assistance in choosing the correct product.

Customer support after the purchase.

Free trials

1

Candidate has not learnt about benefits versus features.

(4 marks)

9 Identify a possible unique selling point (USP) for each of the following:

Car: Fuel economy ✓

Washing machine: Larger drum for bigger loads ✓

Hotel: Spa facilities ✓

Umbrella: Small when folded up to fit into bags easier. ✓

4

(4 marks)

10 Identify two different types of personality and state why each would be useful in a team.

Leaders ✓; useful for inspiring a good work ethic within a team and making important decisions on the team's behalf. ✓

Followers; ✓ useful as they cooperate and work well with others to perform tasks.

Compliant and do not create friction within the team. ✓

4

(4 marks)

- 11 State two areas where staff may need to improve their skills and identify a different way of doing so for each.

Customer interaction. ✓ These skills can be practised and improved via role playing different scenarios. ✓

Product Knowledge. ✓ Staff should sample/test products to ensure that they have a good knowledge base to draw from to advise customers. ✓

(4 marks)

4

- 12 Apart from improving skills, identify four other reasons for staff development.

Keeps staff interested in the job. ✓

Ensures that company standards are widely known and met. ✓

Ensures that staff are aware of and follow the most up to date health and safety procedures. ✓

Identify specific skills and talents in different members of staff to help you to guide staff towards roles they are best suited to.

(4 marks)

3

Last item is not a reason for staff development: if candidate had made it clear that it was to address training needs identified in performance review, it would have attracted a mark.

Question 1 – 12 marks

Dan wishes to gain feedback from the magazine's advertising customers on the level of customer service received. Write a report to compare two possible methods that could be used with your recommendation as to which would be the most effective method and a suggestion on how to encourage customer response.

1

Customer Focus Group: ✓

Organise a regular focus group for a selection of customers. This offers the clients the opportunity to feedback on the current levels of customer service they are receiving and highlight any aspects of the service that they would like to see improved.

Telephone Survey: ✓

Task junior members of staff to work through the customer database, contacting each client to ask them some pre-set questions on customer service and satisfaction. The results can then be collated to give an overview of client experience.

1

Client focus groups are a great way for customers to give feedback; the face to face aspect of the focus groups is a good way to build rapport with clients. The interaction makes the client feel valued and lets them know that opinions are important and illustrates your dedication to providing excellent customer service. The quality of information gathered at focus groups tends to be high as the customers have prepared for the meeting and fully considered the topic as opposed to having to spontaneously answer unexpected questions. Individuals that take part in focus groups often benefit from being able to hear others' opinions as this will often help to invoke memories of their own experiences and you may cover aspects that you hadn't even considered before. ✓

1

The drawbacks to focus groups can be unwillingness on the clients' behalf to sacrifice their time and energy to attend a meeting; you must have a good relationship with the clients whose attendance you request. The sample group with focus groups tends to be smaller than contacting clients over the phone. This could lead to the results being unrepresentative of your wider group of clients. The challenge of organising a group of busy business people to be in the same place at the same time can often be nightmarish and can lead to some not being able to attend. ✓

1

Telephone surveys are excellent at contacting a large number of clients quickly and efficiently. It doesn't inconvenience clients by requiring them to travel to a meeting. The clients will appreciate that you recognise that they are busy people whose time is at a premium. The ease in contacting a large number of customers in a relatively short space of time allows you to see a very accurate snapshot of customer opinion. ✓

1

Telephone surveys can be very prescriptive as you are asking the same questions repeatedly with no option for the clients to touch on other subjects. Some customers may feel that being contacted over the phone without warning for the purpose of a survey is intrusive and there is the possibility of them refusing to participate. The time and expense involved in taking office juniors away from their other duties should not be underestimated or the possible inconvenience this may cause. ✓

2

As we are a small to medium size business with a fairly loyal client base I would recommend the focus group for collecting customer feedback. ✓ Our client database isn't large enough to warrant doing a telephone survey and taking members of staff away from their day-to-day duties. I also believe that as a result of having a smaller client base we have good enough relationships with our clients to ask them to attend a focus group and that the rapport we could build with this kind or regular face to face contact would be invaluable. ✓

1 mark

Candidate loses 3 marks for not providing any heading, introduction or date that would be expected in any report. At level 3, candidates should be able to use an accepted format for reporting to seniors. Candidate has given a good comparison of two different methods and has justified their recommendation. Total score 9 marks.

Question 2 – 11 marks

You have been asked to deal with the following complaint recorded in the customer complaints log this morning. The cause was an error in completing the order form by a junior member of staff. Using the letterhead below, write a letter of apology to deal with the matter effectively and informing the client of the action to be taken by the organisation to ensure it does not happen again.

Dear Mr Baker, ✓

2

I am very sorry ✓ to hear that you have not received your free advert. The order was erroneously taken down by a new member of staff. ✓

1

We value all our customers, old and new, and wish to provide the highest possible service. As a result of this error we are now having all orders checked by a senior member of staff before processing to ensure that this does not happen again. ✓

1

Your advert will run in the next issue TradeUp! and by way of apology I would like to offer you a free, half page, full colour advert to be taken at the time of your choosing. ✓

1

I hope this will help to make up for any inconvenience ✓ caused and I look forward to doing business with you again.

Kind regards

1

A good letter of apology with all the components necessary to endeavour to maintain and satisfy the customer. Candidate loses marks for not using information in the Complaint Log, ie customer's address and date of the complaint. 'Kind regards' not considered a formal enough close. Total score 7.

Question 3 - 9 marks

Reply to Dan's email, giving:

- three steps involved in the performance review process, the required paperwork and the benefits of putting it in place
- four documents involved
- two benefits of implementing the process.

Hi Dan,

I would suggest all or any of the following methods:

- Appraisals with management.

Appraisal forms ✓ with a number of preset questions should be put together to allow the staff to rate themselves ✓ on different areas of customer service and, in turn, be rated by their managers. This allows the staff to express any concerns or requests for additional training in specific areas and for management to give members of staff feedback on their performance.

- Work books:

Staff will be required to fill in workbooks documenting their progress and answering a series of questions on customer service best practice. These books are then reviewed by management who will identify areas for improvement. Workbooks will need to be devised and created for differing levels.

- Mystery Shoppers

Staff will be secretly assessed on their customer service. Individuals need to be recruited to be mystery shoppers; they are usually hired via an agency. The results need to be reviewed and collated by management.

- Individual staff action plan: ✓

Using the results from the above the staff and the management should work together to identify areas for improvement and methods for improving for each member of staff. ✓ A short document should be put together for management and staff to fill in together.

Kind regards

Ella

Candidate has not understood 'performance review' and, whilst some documents are mentioned (appraisal form, action plan) has not specifically identified the documents required for performance review.

Candidate has neglected to mention the benefits of putting the system in place and loses 2 marks.

Total score 4 marks.

Total marks awarded:

| Section A | Section B | Total |
|-----------|-----------|-------|
| 48 | 32 | 80 |
| 37 | 20 | 57 |

Candidate just achieves a First Class Pass. This candidate has not had sufficient practice in writing reports using a standard business format that would be expected at supervisory level. A disappointing Section B: the quality of the candidate's written work suggests that not enough practice papers were completed to comfortably achieve a First Class Pass. There are some gaps in this candidate's knowledge, notably staff performance review, features and benefits, service standards, which suggests inadequate coverage of the syllabus.

7 General Guidance

7.1 Guidance for Tutors

Preparing candidates for the examination

Ideally candidates should have the opportunity to apply the knowledge they have learnt to real life or simulated role play. Candidates should be exposed to examples of both good and bad customer service practice in order to understand how to apply the knowledge and skills taught. Candidates should have practice in completing forms, logs and messages accurately from given information and should also practice drafting letters, memos, emails and reports according to standard business layout and language. Make good use of sample and past examination papers, past examination reports and other information from City & Guilds Qualifications. If you have any questions or queries, please contact us for clarification.

The best indicator that a candidate is ready for the exam is when candidates have covered all areas of the syllabus and can successfully complete past examination papers within the allowed time. Practice is essential so that candidates learn to recognise what is required of them and are able to produce it quickly and accurately.

Success in the examination results from demonstrating the relevant ability in the objectives that will be tested. Practice papers show candidates what is expected of them in an examination.

Hints, tips and recommendations

The Principles of Customer Service qualification at Levels 1, 2 and 3 provides a solid base of the knowledge and skills required which will be beneficial to candidates in whatever they decide to do next, be it further study or entry into, or progress at, work. Where at all possible, it is recommended that candidates have the opportunity to apply the knowledge and skills learnt in a practical environment, whether this is work experience related or through use of simulations. The use of video material or case studies will help to demonstrate both good and bad practice and enable candidates to apply their knowledge to them.

Why candidates fail

Candidates need to be made aware that there is a greater need to think about information in examinations and to deal with it in appropriate ways and with enough depth as they progress through Levels. Candidates should be careful to ensure that they have properly read what is required of them in the question and not assumed what is required. Candidates who fail to practise during their course of study are those most likely to fail. Simply attending a course of study without further practice at home is not recommended for obvious reasons and candidates should expect to receive regular exercises to complete at home which should be marked and returned to the candidate.

General Guidance

7.2 Guidance for Candidates

Preparing for the examination

Try to put into practice the knowledge and skills you acquire during your course. You should practise drafting written communications and completing forms and messages clearly and accurately. Check through the syllabus to ensure you are confident in all of the outcomes required and make good use of sample and past examination papers and the feedback from your tutors to test for gaps in your knowledge. Complete sample examination papers against the clock to ensure you are able to complete them in the time allowed. Past examination reports and other information from your tutors will inform you on reasons why previous candidates have failed.

Hints, tips and recommendations

We all have experience of being a customer and you should keep a note of your experiences as such, as examples of good and bad practice. Collect examples of business communications and practise drafting your own letters, memos, emails and reports. Collecting examples of organisations' surveys and questionnaires will enable you to see and judge the types of information they require from their customers, whilst customer charters and organisations' service standards are often available from their websites to enable you to see how levels of customer service are established.

Why candidates fail

You should be careful to ensure that you have properly read what is required of you in the question and not assumed what is required. Failure to complete enough practice exercises and examination papers during their course of study is most likely to lead to failure. As you move through the levels, you should be aware of the need to give answers in greater depth. Simply attending a course of study without further practice at home is not recommended for obvious reasons and you should expect to receive regular exercises to complete at home which should be marked by your tutor and returned to you with feedback.
